Parish History & Additional Information.

Bilton in Ainsty and Bickerton villages have been linked since Norman times. The Domesday Book (1086) states that the combined area was approximately 3 miles in length and 3 miles in breadth. Cultivated land was said to have been equivalent to “9 plough area”, and the population was noted as including “8 villeins (feudal serfs) with 4 ploughs”.

The Norman invaders took over Church administration in these parts around 1150 and probably commenced their work of reconstructing the Saxon church known as St Helens. Seven centuries later the renowned architect Sir Gilbert Scott was involved in the restoration of the church.

Bilton in Ainsty owes its name to the fact that the first settlement was on land farmed by a man called ‘Bilo’, with ton being added as a derivation from Saxon for village or farmstead. Bickerton means ‘Bee Keeper Farm’.

Sometime during the 1500’s the Wharton family, who had lived in Healaugh for centuries, bought a 470 acre estate which included Bickerton, Bilton Syningthwaite and Walton. Phillip, Fourth Lord Wharton, was a staunch puritan and did much to encourage the Church in the area.

This same area changes hands again in 1871, being bought by Mr A F W Montague of Wighill for £30,000.

In 1931, part of what formed ‘The Ainsty Estate’ including Ingmanthorpe Hall, parts of Bilton in Ainsty, Long Marston, Kirk Deighton, Wighill and Wetherby, plus the whole of Bickerton and Cowthorpe villages, was sold at auction.

Since 1994 most of Bilton in Ainsty village has enjoyed Conservation Area status. Today there are some 354 people shown on the Electoral Register living in about 168 dwellings, split between the villages.

Present Day Context
